American football practice: Changing in the club room

The football club room is right next to the playing field. It's such a small room that only about nine people can squeeze in at the same time. Only third-year students are allowed to use the club room; the first- and second-year guys have to change outside. It serves as our locker room and the store room for our precious protective gear and other equipment.

A lot of school clubs have a "manager" who helps us with the equipment and other jobs, but because of our head coach's policy, we don't have a manager. We wash our own uniforms and do all the other club stuff ourselves.
